Work Planning

ONE OF THE problems attached to British Columbia's extraordinary boom of the mid-1960s is that everyone wants to get things done all at once and there are clearly not enough firms or workers in the construction industry to cope with the demand.

The point is stressed by the forecast that the forthcoming $4,750,000 building program at the University of Victoria may largely have to be built by either mainland, out of province, or even foreign construction firms.

The chief architect of the university has warned that local builders will not be able to tackle all the jobs that are coming up in the near future.

University of British Columbia, and the Simon Fraser University are also embarking on major construction programs, and to this has to be added the current school and municipal construction, even before one begins to think of what private enterprise is planning to do.

An announcement by the B.C. Hydro this week says that over 2,000 persons will be employed this summer on the Peace River project. At least half-a-dozen major pulp mill jobs are being undertaken this year involving jobs for at least another 3,000 construction workers.

A new $1,000,000 township is to be built at Fraser Lake to provide accommodation for a great new mining operation at Endako. It is not surprising that there should be jubilation at the B.C. government level. Activity of this sort is the best possible advertisement for the province and it insures that there will be jobs for all for some time to come. What is disturbing is the fact that a situation even more critical than existed in the mid-1950s is arising. At that time there were so many construction jobs that contractors, endeavoring to meet completion deadlines and desperate for craftsmen and laborers, were robbing one another by offering uneconomic wage inducements for workers in rival con-

At that time several construction firms on Vancouver Island were paying wages up to 50 per cent over the union level and in addition were throwing in travelling expenses and travelling overtime for workers drawn from other localities.

This can and, no doubt, will happen again unless some form of overall construction planning can be made to stick. It is just building up inflationary problems for the future if the construction industry is asked to take on more than it can tackle.

Required urgently at the moment is a strongly supported movement to spread out the construction jobs so that the dangers of insane competition for workers, who do not exist, is this time averted.

It is to be noted that in the case of B.C. Hydro It has spread out its construction work for the Peace and Columbia projects over a period of nearly 20 years during which time fairly steady jobs will be provided for the firms and their workers who take on

This is the type of planned economy which does something to avert the traditional theory that every boom must be followed by a bust.

It should be copied on a province-wide basis.

A High Cost

THE USE OF GAS and napalm by the United States in its war against the Viet Cong rebels in Viet hington much of the sympathy it has hitherto commanded for its present stand in Southeast Asia.

Indeed it would be surprising if a good many of the Western and Asian governments which have to date lent their tacit support to America in what has generally been considered a holding war against invading Communists do not revise or even reverse their present attitudes toward the United States policy in Viet Nam.

Until now the United States military command has justified its actions on the grounds that retreat from Viet Nam would simply mean that it would be called upon to fight the same war at a later date in a different place. Washington obviously believes that the Communists must be stopped now at all and any

With this latest turn of events the cost may well prove to be too high, if not for the United States. then for its allies.

Certainly the use of gas-lethal or otherwisecoupled with napalm bombs, in themselves the most dreadful of all so-called conventional weapons, poses a grave moral question to any nation which claims to honor humanity.

Already the ranks of the government of the United States' most trusted and reliable ally, Great Britain, are split on the issue and revulsion is sweeping the rest of Europe.

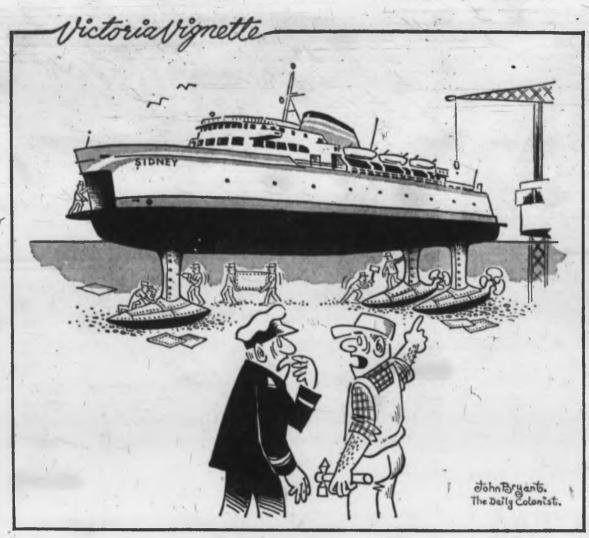

Apart from the fact that the United States has now taken the chance of alienating its friends it has also opened the door to its egemies to retaliate in like fashion. In that event the United States will only have itself to blame-for it is Washington alone which must take the responsibility for escalating a battle of containment into a war in which anything goes.

Last Resort

A LDERMEN HAVE been looking-with commendable reluctance—at a potential route through the northern part of Beacon Hill Park to facilitate the flow of traffic to and from James Bay. The idea is to lengthen Michigan Street, from where it now ends by South Park School, through a largely rocky area to join the Superior Street extension. This extension was cut through several years ago with the aim of providing a direct way to Cook Street, although the linkage remains incomplete.

No one can question that there is a serious peakhours traffic problem in the district, or that it can be expected to build up still more. In the main James Bay roads were not laid out to accommodate the density of population that now exists there and is rapidly increasing, nor the number of citizens who today have their civil service, industrial and other employment in the neighborhood. The new parking arrangements for government employees when the museum site is evacuated may further complicate the daily tangle.

But the further dissection of Beacon Hill Park must be the last thing most Victorians would want. Before city council gives further thought to this proposal, it surely should look for and examine every reasonable alternative, including more orderly channeling of rush-hour traffic with a few additional signals. Cutting through the park should only be a desperate last resort.

No Strings Attached

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

In yesterday's column I told the story of the new Giant Multiflora sweet peas a new race of this lovely flower which bears as many as eight or nine big blooms on each stem, while still retaining the grace, delicacy and clean, light fragrance characteristic of the sweet pea-I offered to send a sample packet containing about a dozen of the new seeds to any of my readers who would like to try their hand at growing these grand sweet peas, and for your convenience, you'll find an order from or coupon below. There are a few points in connection with these Colonist free seed offers, though, that I'd like to clear up before we get started on the sowing instructions

First, I'd like to make it clear there are no strings to this offer you don't have to take out a subscription to the Colonist to get your free seeds, nor do you need a coupon clipped from the paper-that coupon is there purely for your convenience, and a letter or note will serve just as well.

This being the case, I'd like you to spread the good word among your neighbors that they, too, can have a free sample of the new sweet pea seeds, with or without a Colonist coupon. Mind you, I wouldn't exactly burst into tears if you were to needle your neighbor into becom-ing a Colonist subscriber, but there is no obligation on your part, nor on his.

In return, I ask only two things: First, be sure to enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope in your letter. When it arrives here, our Colonist girls will open your letter, take out the self-addressed letter, slip a packet of seeds in it, lick it shut and mail it right back

Because of the production-line character of this operation, it would be best if you didn't ask me any garden questions in your seed letter. If a real emergency arises your garden and you find yourself in urgent need of information or advice, write a separate letter, enclosing another stamped and self-addressed envelope.

The second thing I ask is that you let me know later this year how you make out with your free seeds. The Giant Multiflora strain is still so new that anything can bloom, how many flowers on each stem you get, and whether any unusual flower colors turn up. Who knows perhaps one of your seeds will produce the long-sought yellow sweet pea.

In growing the Giant Multiflora sweet peas, it is well to remember that our climate is just about ideal for this flower—better, in fact, than California, where the new strain was developed. Sweet peas like our cool nights, clean salt air, our heavy summer dews, and they don't take too kindly to the intense summer heat of inland

Because of our favorable conditions, it is quite possible to bung your free seeds in the ground any old how, and still get flower stems of fours and fives. However. you may as well do things right, and for really exceptional flowers, I think it pays to give them those few little extra attentions which produce prize-winning flowers.

One of these extras which make for better plants and earlier blooms is to "chit" or sprout the seeds, and we'll discuss this in my next column.

His Yoke Easy to Bear

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) - "Brigitte Bardot is like a little child. You give her a toy or a lollipop and it makes her day. Jeanno Moreau is a woman, a mother, a sister, a sweet-heart," said young George Hamilton. George recently completed his leading role with Brigitte and Jeanne in Viva Maria in Mexico. "It's an action picture, but the women have all the action. I spend all of my time in a wooden yoke and in one scene I am raped by Moreau." He obviously didn't mind, because when Jeanne invited him to spend six weeks at the home she rented in Cuernavaca, he accepted with alacrity, to put it mildly.

"She had her maid with her and her French cook. The meals were marvellous. And so is Jeanne. She is such a woman. You can see the tragedy in her eyes. She was very ill last year. Cancer. But the operation was successful. although for a while they didn't know whether she would live or not. Then her son was injured in an auto accident. suffering has increased the depth and the warmth, makes everyone feel necessary. I've never mt anyone She makes everyone feel necessary. I've never met anyone fantastic woman."

"How did the two French ladies get on?" I asked George. There had been reports of some coldness at the beginning of the film. "It was a bit cold at first," he admitted, "but they became quite friendly as the picture progressed. Brigitte and Bob Zaguri gave a party at her house and Jeanne had such a good time she stayed until five in the morning." Zaguri, the longest lasting of Bardot's -- has been with her in Mexico all the time and rarely leaves her side. Oh yes, George considers Brigitte "the sexiest girl in the world."

Viva Maria has been plagued with illness. First, Brigitte came down with flu and laryngitis, then Jeanne, then director Louis Malle was ill and had to close down. They have just resumed, and George may be going back for a few days to dub his role in English. It was all done in French. which the American actor learned phonetically. "As a result, I've been offered two pictures in France," he told me, and he may dash over there to sign a deal before his Hullabaloo taping in New York. We will be seeing him soon as country and western singer Hank Williams in Metro's movie, Your Cheatin' Heart.

Zea Zea Gabor and husband Herbert Hunter have a five-year plan for everything — their home in Bel Air will be paid for within five years, ditto her jewels. The plan was to pay 20 per cent a year. It's my hunch that at the end of the five years — they have two to go, Zsa Zsa will take stock of her life and decide whether she wants to be a wife, or simply a career woman. Of course one can always be both.

Clint Walker, the tallest actor in Hollywood, has a starring role in Nevada Smith, with Steve McQueen in the title role. This will be the young Nevada. The late Alan Ladd played his last role as the older man in The Carpetbaggers Barry Sullivan, all tidily divorced, has to be in Rome early in April to star in The Outlaw Monster - that's a new kind of horror movie. He has a stop date of April 5 for his role of husband in Judy Garland's Harlow . . . and Vie Morrow will be off to Japan to find a girl for his film, The Shrine at Kyoto . . . While Tom Stern left wife Sam Eggar in London to fly to Dublin for a role in Richard Burton's The Spy Who Came In From The Cold.

Anglicans Will Join Modern Trend

A new Sunday school curriculum will start for Anglican churches throughout C a n a d a this September.

"And so the Anglican Church will join the United Church and the Baptist Church in a change in church school educational programs," announced the latest publication of Anglican Church News.

The aim of the new program, for adult study and youth programs as well as the work with church's teachings are related more closely the Christian gospel to modern life."

In teaching the youngsters, the life experiences of the pupils will be the starting point rather than the Bible or Catechism to better "help them see how the church'e teachings are related

Teachers will be free to decide what particular topics they will deal with in their own classes week by week in the church school.

The curriculum was developed as a result of a five-year study. The first of the curriculum materials will be available to churches in April.

Queen's Own

There were tears and cheers, handshakes and hugs, as the 1st Battalion Queen's Own Rifles advance party for Cyprus flew out of Patricia Bay airport Tuesday night.

It was the last of a series of goodbyes that began at 2 p.m. when Lieutenant - Governor Pearkes presented the battalion with the Hamilton Gault marksmanship trophy.

"I wish you a pleasant trip, Godspeed and a safe return," he said. "I am confident you will do Canada proud."

Bright Sun

Several hundred attended the colorful ceremony under a bright sun as a chill wind whipped across the Work Point parade square.

More goodbyes were said and tears shed when the navy buses left for Patricia Bay just after 6:30 p.m. Again at the airport there were more to say goodbye. As the men filed into the RCAF Yukon aircraft and took their seats the Battalion Bugles

To Screen Grants

Municipal Watchdog Appointed

The Community Welfare Council will act as a watchdog and a screen for the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee in the matter of grants, it was decided Tuesday.

Under a new policy, approved at a special meeting of the intermunicipal committee. Tuesday, municipalities receiving grant requests will pass them on to the welfare council which will require budgets and audited statements for review.

The council will assess the figures and validity of the request and make recommendations to the municipal treasurers and to the intermunicipal com-

TV NOTES: The word from Madison Avenue is that the networks have decided to live with the new U.S. Federal Communications Commission ruling that network control of programs be cut to 50 per cent from the present 91. Independent producers have already started pitting one network against another in negotiations which would make a good novel.

One insider says: "Don't let anyone kid you that this is going to lead to better programming. God and man together couldn't get two or three hours of quality prime time programs on the air every night." For the record, two-thirds of the 100 series pilots made for next fall were failures. The loss: $6,000,000 . . . in all, 40 present shows will be dropped, including For the People, to my great regret. Others

"You the next of kin?" I may not have mentioned are TW3, Wagon Train, Mr. Novak, Rogues, Defenders, Tycoon, Kraft Theatre and Doctors and Nurses . . . ABC Scope was saved this week for next fall . . . and ABC will get into the 007

act with Amos Burke, Secret Agent. Wednesday's Highlights

Furore at Radio Hearings

Hot Time for the Hot Line Shows

VANCOUVER (CP) - Uncontrolled open-line radio programs came under heavy fire from various groups Tuesday at the spring hearings of the Board of Broadcast Governors.

Some groups said one Vancouver open-line program resulted at times in "group defamation" and in moves that in effect "agitate for lawlessness." (See also Page 13.)

Members of the board saidthat while wanting to maintain proper standards, they were faced with the question of free speech versus the need for greater controls.
